In an effort to stimulate the interest of the American people in historic objects, antiques were placed on the duty-free list by an act of Congress in 1906. The plan has not worked out so well, and now the Treasury Department is advocating the imposition of a duty again.

It is declared that between 75 and 80 per cent of so-called antiques imported into the United States during the last 30 years have been fakes, and statistics are quoted to substantiate the statement.

In 1906, the last year that duty was charged, imports of antiques totalled only $478,000. In later years, imports have at times gone beyond 600 million dollars. The Treasury says that obviously no such store of real antiques could have been found by collectors in England, whence most of the imports originated.

Whether the renewal of duties is the best solution is a question, but at least there should be increased vigilance by inspectors, and by purchasers as well, to curb the antique racket, whereby the government and American suckers are defrauded of vast sums.

The total eclipse of the sun which was observed at its best in the middle of the Pacific Ocean on June 8 was one of the most notable in history, its maximum period of totality being seven minutes and four seconds, only 26 seconds shorter that the longest possible. It will be several months before the full significance of the new photographs can be interpreted.

Total eclipse of the sun visible in the United States are very rare, the last being that of August 31, 1932, while the next will not occur until 1945, when one will be visible in portions of Idaho and Montana.

In 1954 another will be seen along a path from Nebraska to Michigan; in 1970 one will cross Florida, and in 1979 one will be visible in the extreme northwestern part of the country.

But the next total eclipse to be seen over any considerable area of the United States will be that of 2017. It will sweep entirely across the continent, through Oregon, Colorado, Tennessee and intervening states, passing into the Atlantic in the vicinity of Wilmington, N. C. But few people now living will see that one.

Other total eclipses visible in portions of the United States will occur during the 21st century, in the years 2024, 2044, 2045, 2052 and 2073. Which is far enough to look ahead for the present.

NIGHT BASEBALL IS SOUGHT FOR CAMERON

The Chamber of Commerce has tendered its services looking toward equipment of a playing field for night baseball in Cameron.

Directors in meeting Tuesday night offered to assist in any way possible and named a committee from its own membership and asked others to serve.

The immediate purpose of the movement is to ascertain the cost and methods to finance the project. Also citizens interested will be contacted and sought to underwrite the program which would cost around $2500.

It is suggested that a baseball council be organized with strict business policies and management of a ball club along better financial lines attained. Under a night system of baseball at least 4 games a week could be played. An average income of $150 per game would liquidate the debt and pay expenses, it was believed.

Romeo - Juliet Show Tops Movie Bill Here

"Romeo and Juliet" the world's greatest love story, climaxes the week of great pictures at Cameron Theatre.

To make the film doubly attractive producers have cast into the picture Norma Shearer, the great artist of 'Strange Interlude' and Leslie Howard, and then to make it a super personal production John Barrymore is added to the list of stars.

What William Shakespeare missed in the modern color and romantic glamor, the producers have added. There will be only two shows a day. The picture is of such length that the matinee starts at 2:30 p. m. and the next show will begin at 8:30 p. m.

The clock has been turned back five centuries in recuiting the background for this great Shakespearean masterpiece.

Mr. Swift was staking all on the stupendous production to be the best program of the year. There will be no advance in prices for "Romeo and Juliet."

The show opens here Thursday June 24th and runs through Friday

MINISTER BLAMES DEVIL FOR CRIME

A second confession in great detail was sent to newspapers Monday by J. L. McRea, minister, now held in jail here pending action of the grand jury for defrauding an insurance company.

The confession, too lengthy for publication, discusses the crime for which he is being held. McRea says he was tempted and let the Devil take charge of him for a few hours.

While in this state of insubordination to the 'spirit" he laid his left arm on the rails of the Missouri Pacific near Hicks in Milam county and let the wheels of the locomotive cut off the limb. He collected $500 from the Cameron Life Insurance Company and had retained a lawyer to sue the railroad for $15,000.

He said that when he regained his standing with the Lord he was moved to confess and is now ready to pay for the crime.

CITIZENS HERE ARMY GUESTS ON JUNE 17

Approximately 3500 Cameron and Milam County citizens visited the quarters of a detachment of 160 men and 10 officers from the second division of the U. S. army at Ft. Sam Houston, which made camp in city park Thursday, to stay over-night.

Major L. A. Page in command of the troops on tour was highly pleased with the reception in Cameron and said the purpose of the tour, which is to acquaint citizens with army life, is being fulfilled. The good-will tour is something new for the army and the idea was conceived by Gen. James Parson of Ft. Sam Houston.

The detachment left Ft. Sam Houston on June 15, stopping first in Taylor and made Cameron the second day. They left Cameron on Friday morning and toured and camped in the following towns: Marlin, Mexia, Jacksonville, Palestine, Lufkin. On June 24th they are scheduled to be in Huntsville; June 25th, in Bryan; June 26th, in Navasota and June 28th, in Brenham and then return to Ft. Sam Houston, it was announced by Lieut. J. J. Jakle.

Plane Drops Message

Equipment and materials from the 23rd and 9th Infantry, 15th and 12th Field Artillery; second medical regiment; chemical warefare, and second signal company were on display. The main attractions were the latest model tank, and a 75 milo-meter gun. As an exhibition from the signal department, a plane flew over the camp, contacted from the ground by radio, operated by Lieutenant W. J. Givens, and dropped a message at the feet of the Lieutenant, from General Parsons to the Mayor of Cameron, Charles C. Smith. A return message was sent from Cameron by carrier pigeon.

Major Page Perfect Host

Band concerts were given during the day and at night by the Ninth Infantry band. At 6:15 p. m., eighteen business men of Cameron were guests of Major Page at a camp supper. A menu consisting of ham, beans, potatoes, pickles, corn, combination salad, butter, bread, rice and raisin pudding and tea were served. Major Page was a perfect host. "We are endeavoring to acquaint the people with army life as so few have had opportunity to know anything of army life. We accept young men who meet qualifications educationally, physically and morally, and place them in groups for which they show aptitude," Maj. Page said.

Officers Praised

The commanding officer was assisted efficiently and courteously in explanations and demonstrations by Captains D. H. McDaniel and W. W. Roe; Liuets. J. L. Dark, W. J. Givens, Stacy Gooch, J. J. Jakle, and L. K. Pepple.

OFFICE AND CANDIDATES

(Editor's note: This article is published as a news item and represents the personal views of Mr. Ferguson only.)

My wife and I are receiving many letters every week, asking if my wife is again going to run for Governor. Some of the letters seem to be merely seeking information, while many of the letters urge my wife to run for a third term. By the way, there is a quite well defined rumor around Austin that Governor Allred is thinking of standing for a third term. Some of his friends are talking about his chances.

My wife has asked me to answer the letters which she is getting and tells me to say that she has no desire to again meet the rigors of a political campaign. While my wife's health and my health is better than it has been in years, yet we are fully aware and we have not forgotten the physical ordeals of political contests, and neither she nor I are looking for the hazard and turmoil of politics.

Unless there should be some wide spread and general demand amounting to a public duty to render a personal service, my wife says that she is willing to leave the field to the younger statesmen who are willing to extinguish or distinguish themselves on the altar of their country.

Frankly, I do not look for any such demand that would induce my wife to become again a candidate. However, there is already a well developed idea in the minds of the people that there must be a decided change in the administration of the government, both state and national.

With continued spending yearly of over seven billion dollars ($300) per family a year by the Federal government and over 85 million a year by the State ($70 per family) amounting already to thirty-five billion debt of the Federal government and a deficit of over 32 million by the State of Texas, it is already so burdensome that the people are alarmed and they are impressed with the serious necessity of electing people to office who will have the courage to call a halt to governmental extravagance.

A 32 million deficit of the State of Texas os far more oppressive than a debt of billions by the Federal Government, because the nation has more sources of revenue with which to pay its debts.

This is why so many people urge my wife to again run for Governor. The miserable mess which has been made of state affairs in causing the people to ask who can best handle the deplorable situation that confronts us. It is not that my wife's administration was so good, but that the present adminstration is so bad that makes the people want a change. In any event the people should select the next Governor from the standpoint of ability and qualification. Certainly we have had enough of hand shaking and baby kissing politicians.

The people are entitled to a break, and it won't hurt if we have a dozen candidates to draw from in the next race for Governor. What we may fail to get in brains might be made up in luck. Come on statesmen and tell us where you are "frum" and what you are "fur."

Saturday Night Supper Club Meets June 12th

Mr. and Mrs. John Jeter, Mr. and Mrs. B. V. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, and Dr. and Mrs. Leland Denson, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Cottle were hosts.

The special motif of the evening was to develop the celebration of "Fritz and Clara Fahrendrof's 25th wedding anniversary." The decorations carried out the idea of a home wedding with an arch of tapers burning. The arrival of the Fahrendorfs was delayed by friends until all was ready. At the moment of entrance the house lights were turned out and the group entering found themselves in a procession to the improvised altar with the other guests in place awaiting them.

Before marching down the aisle, Mrs. John Jeter and Mrs. Leland Denson sang, "I Love You Truly," with Mrs. C. G. Swift playing the wedding march.

"Fritz and Clara" were met by acting Chaplain F. E. Woodruff who asked certain questions reminiscent of an earlier ceremony, at the end of which presentation was made of a silver platter to the "bride and groom."

Later a scrap book was presented having a page for each couple in the club and appropriately inscribed with a sentiment starting with one letter of the Fahrendorfs name and signed with a picture of the authors.

A buffet supper was served.

Combining Beauty With Talent

Maxine Marlowe

IF pretty is as pretty does, Maxine Marlowe, star soloist on Phil Spitalny's "Hour of Charm", is a credit to the adage. Although assigned to the role of a radio songstress who is heard but seldom seen, Maxine, never neglects her make-up.

Being always perfectly groomed, whether alone with the mike, or in public, is the secret of being exuberant, the vivacious kind of a person people like to have around, and admire. While Maxine never uses heavy make-up for the street, she believes little beauty accents which highlight the eyes and neatly applied lipstick are necessary to a sweet disposition. In fact, nothing makes a woman's disposition sweeter than to know she is perfectly groomed and well-turned-out. Nobody can be responsible for that except yourself, according to Maxine, who is heard Monday nights at 9:30 (E.D.S.T.) over the NBC network.

The bride groom is the youngest son of Ernest Brod. He was reared in this city and attended school here. For the present, he and his wife are making their home with his father.

Miss Dulce McCall, Mrs. Phillip Reid, Mrs. E. C. Cole, Mrs. Dero Jenkins, Mrs. Marvin Franklyn, Mrs. Robert Stedman, Mrs. Franklyn Dusek, Mrs. H. E. Garner, Mrs. Lester Williams, Mrs. Charles Davidson, Mrs. Henry Patillo, Mrs. Chas. (Travelers Safety Service)

So you never gamble!

Do you ever cross the street in the middle of the block to save a minute or two? If so, you gamble the millions of minutes remaining in your normal life span against that inconsequential minute or two.

Do you ever take an occasional chance while driving your car? Ever pass another car on a curve or a hill? Ever exceed the speed limit? Ever pass a standing street car? Ever fail to signal before turning?

If you do take such chances, you are eleven times as likely to be killed or injured in a traffic accident this year as the holder of a sweepstakes ticket is to win even a small prize.

When you gamble in lotteries your stake is a few dollars at most, but when you gamble in traffic you bet your life.

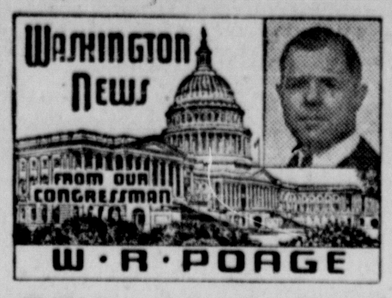
Bentley Lee Hause Returns Home From Hospital in City

Bentley Lee Hause was returned to his home in Hoyte on Wednesday evening after being in the Cameron Hospital for seven weeks with double pneumonia.

During the critical days of his illness he was not expected to live, but close attention of physicians and nurses restored him. He still sees his doctors every day.

Bentley Lee is 9 years old and has gained in health until he now weighs 45 lbs. For a long time he could walk only with the aid of his nurse.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hause and a brother of Miss Sidney Hause, well known and popular student in Yoe High School.



Washington newspapers have devoted most of their headlines this past week to discussion of the District of Columbia tax bill, but while not so spectacular I cinsider the developments in regard to farm and labor legislation of infinitely more importance to the people of the United States. The question of whether the City of Washington should levy a tax on chain stores, gasoline, Congressmen, slot machines, or pay a reasonable real estate tax ((they now pay only $1.50 here for all purposes) may be a good subject of conversation, but its determination can not very materially affect the happiness of our people in Central Texas. On the other hand, if a farm tenancy bill is not passed, thousands of families are never going to own their own homes that would otherwise do so, and if the reduced interest rate on Federal Farm loans is not continued thousands of home owners are going to become tenants. And regardless of how one makes a living, or where he lives the price he gets for his labor on these products, as well as what he pays for all he buys, is going to be materially affected by the provisions of the wage and hour labor bill.

Last Thursday the House Committee on Agriculture agreed on a new bill "to promote the ownership of farm homes." This bill is practically identical with the bill passed out some weeks ago, except that the amounts are reduced so as to authorize only $10,000,000 the first year, $25,000,000 the second year, and $50,000,000 the third year, to be advanced to tenants for the purchase of homes. While the Senate bill on the same subject would have the government buy land and then resell it to tenants, the House bill contemplates direct loans to the farmers themselves, subject to approval of a local committee who must pass on the farmer and the farm. I think this is a much better procedure than any plan of simply making the farmer the tenant of the government. The reduction in the amounts furnished in the bill was brought about in an effort to co-operate with the economy program, but I am afraid that the figures are now so small that we will be able to reach very few of those who need an desire this aid.

On the other hand, the President sent a message in which he urged the Senate to defeat the House bill already passed which would extend the present 3 per cent interest rate on Federal Farm loans. It seems to me just as important to enable those of our citizens who have purchased homes and who are now trying to pay them out, as it is to aid those who have not yet purchased. I can see no logic in appropriating money to loan to would-be home owners at 3 per cent and at the same time saying to those who have started down the road toward home owenership that "we cannot let you have 3 per cent money." The government is borrowing money at a little less than 3 per cent and I do not think it should try to make a profit on its farm loans. I hope the Senate will go ahead and pass the bill, but I greatly fear that they may not.

Consideration of the wage and hour labor bill was brought to a standstill last week by the sudden death of Representative Connery, Chairman of the House Labor Committee. He will probably be succeeded by Mrs. Norton of New Jersey, thus placing another woman in a key position in regard to labor, along with Mrs. Perkins the present Secretary of Labor. The labor bill under discussion would, if passed, practically control all wages and all hours of employment in the United States. It is generally admitted that there should be a greater distribution of the labor that is available and the restricting of working hours is the most generally advocated method of accomplishing this, but along with such control comes a whole host of other problems,—as the effect on all prices. the relation of usable income of the farmer and the laboring man. In other words, there is always the danger that in trying to correct one evil we may bring about greater evils somewhere else.

tions of private wealth is in the hands of men the remainder being owned by 23 women, each of whom is worth more than 25 million dollars.

Perhaps the two best known to the public are Doris Duke Cromwell, the tobacco heiress and Barbara Hutton, now the Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow, whose fortune came from the Woolworth five and ten-cent stores. These are also the youngest of the country's extremely rich women.

Five of the 23 are inheritors of the estates of the late Payne Whitney and Harry Payne Whitney, three share in the Dodge automobile fortune, three derived their money from the Woolworth stores, three have interests in the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, and the rest are widows or daughters of financial giants in various lines.

Only one, Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks, is heir to a fortune made by a woman. She is the daughter of the late Hetty Green, from whom she inherited about 80 million dollars. Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, widow of the famed steel magnate, is one of the wealthiest 23.

About half of these rich women take an active interest in their business affairs, and more than half engage in philanthropic enterprises on a large scale.

Of eight inventions which Dr. C. M. A. Stine calls "milestones of railroad progress," none was invented by a man whose business was railroads.

Morse, who invented telegraphy, was an artist. Pullman was a Chicago street contractor and the railroads were reluctant to adopt his sleeping car. Eli H. Janney, who patented the first automatic car coupling was a clerk in a dry goods store. The automatic block-signal system was originated by a retired textile manufacturer, Thomas S. Hall.

Westinghouse was a 23-year-old carpenter-machinist when he invented the air brake. A physician invented the vestibule buffer, eliminating open platforms. The refrigerator car was largely developed by packers. And the first electric locomotive was designed by Moses G. Farmer, a school teacher.

Charles F. Kettering, head of General Motors' research department and one of America's greatest inventors today, says a man seldom ever invents anything in the field in which he is trained—he knows too much about the obstacles.

Kettering, incidentally, helped develop the fever machine now used by physicians to cure pneumonia, paresis and St. Vitus' dance.

Mrs. Lenora Ingersoll of Galveston, Texas, who was married in August, 1935, recently sued her husband for divorce on the grounds that he was "female."

Father of Gaines Testifies

Clive Gaines, father of the dead youth, testified Wednesday morning. Gaines said his son stepped outside the store and was followed by Butler, Virgil and David Galbreath and Doyle Smith. "Just a few seconds later I met my boy at the door and he said: "Daddy, that scoundrel Butler has cut me, get me to a Doctor." He was taken to Temple.

The state rested late Tuesday to wait for Mr. L. F. Pollock of the Kings Daughters Hospital who was a witness to testify about the wounds of young Gaines.

Indications are the case may go to the jury sometime late this week.

Doctor Testifies

Dr. Pollock testified Wednesday morning describing the wound Gaines received and stated such wound was mortal. Gaines was taken to the King Daughters' Hospital, Temple on the night he was wounded and stayed there until March 31.

Dr. W. F. Etter of Rogers had rendered first aid to Gaines on the night he was wounded. He also described the wound as mortal.

Defense Witnesses

The state rested on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. Donald Hine, 15 year old youth of the Val Verde community and his brother, Homer Hine, 16 were the first two defense witnesses. Each of the two boys told of fights between the defendant and Clyde Gaines, a brother to G. C. Gaines. Fights between Clyde Gaines and Nolan Butler had occured in the fall of 1936 at a party near Rogers one Saturday night and on the following morning, they had another fight at an amateur program at Bryant Station.
